KMK Attorney to Help In-house and Outside Counsel Successfully Navigate Electronic Discovery

Kohner, Mann & Kailas Shareholder Robert L. Gegios will be moderating a program designed to guide both in-house and outside counsel through issues and concerns that arise in dealing with electronic discovery and evidence.

In particular, the program will explore best practices for minimizing the extraordinary expense that can be faced in dealing with electronic information, while still respecting concerns for proper retention and production of electronic matter.

"What is evident is that practitioners can no longer rely on approaches that were developed to handle information kept only in paper form. Following what was accepted practice in the past may lead now to substantial additional costs and sanctions."

The program is an element of the three day, 31st Annual Corporate Practice Institute (CPI) Legal Seminar.
